The Rainbow Garden

By Jeanne B. Hargett

Terry looked out of the window into the yard.

“There are green bushes with red berries growing in our yard,” he said. “Yellow sunflowers and purple violets are growing in our yard. Orange butterflies are there, too.

But there is one color of the rainbow I do not see.”

Mom helped Terry build a birdhouse with a small round hole in front. Then Mom nailed the birdhouse to a pole in the yard.

Terry said, “The family who lives here will like green bushes, red berries, and orange butterflies. And I will like seeing all the colors of the rainbow. This birdhouse is ready for bluebirds.”
