Read the paragraph below. In that paragraph, everybody’s favorite adventurer, Mrs. Waffenschmidt, offers clues about the place she is visiting today. Use those clues to help you figure out where in the world Mrs. Waffenschmidt is. Write your answer on the line at the bottom of the page.

I look tiny compared to one of the four gigantic statues that stand guard at the entrance to this very old temple. Built more than 3,000 years ago by a king, the statues rise to a height of about 65 feet. They were cut from sandstone cliffs found along a famous river in Africa. Actually, there are two temples at this site. I am standing beside the largest one, called the Great Temple. In 1964, when more water was needed for this desert nation, a man-made lake -- Lake Nasser -- was created nearby. That lake threatened this beautiful site so workers cut the statues into pieces and then reassembled them on higher ground about 200 feet above their original locations. I love doing jigsaw puzzles, but that must have been a very difficult puzzle to complete! The job of saving those two temples was done in the 1960s and cost $36 million. If you look closely at the temples’ statues, you can still see some of the cuts in the blocks; but most of the joints have been filled so it looks like the statues have always stood here.

Can you name the place I am visiting? Where in the world is this place found?
