The sun woke up Rob early in the morning. It was sew good to be back in the small ohio town where he grown up. He was eager to spend some time with his 87-year-old grandfather in the families cabin at Lagoon lake, so he hopped out of bed. Grandfather was just begin to cook breakfast. "Yum! I smell bacon and eggs!" Rob said.

As Rob held out his plate to be serve breakfast, he seen a film-like substance on his plate. "Is this plate clean," he ask his grandfather."

"That plate is as clean as cold water can get it," his grandfather said. Go on and finish your meal."

That afternoon, while eating burgers for lunch, Rob saw tiny specks around the edge of his plate. It look like there was dried egg on the plate two. "Are you sure this plate is clean?" he asked his grandfather.

Without looking up from his burger, grandfather said, "I told you before, that dish are as clean as cold water can get it. Now dont ask me about it anymore!"

Later that afternoon, as Rob was on his way out to get the newspaper, the dog started to growl. The old dog wouldn't let Rob out the door. Grandfather, you're dog won't let me out," Rob complained.

Without looking away from the football game on TV, grandfather shouted, Come here, Coldwater. Come here, boy!"
