These temples are really amazing to see. Because of their remote location, and the large jungles that hide them from view, westerners didn't see them until 1860. French missionaries discovered the structures that legends say were built by gods or by giants. I am standing by one of the most massive structures. It is about 200 feet high and was built for the Hindu god, Vishnu, in the 12th century. This temple is so important to the history of this land that it is pictured on the country's flag. My guide tells me that the temple, with a 4-mile long moat surrounding it, is considered the world's largest religious building. Located about 100 miles from the capital city of Phnom Penh, the movie Tomb Raider was filmed in this area. Since the site is considered sacred, visitors must take off hats and shoes before entering. Also, wearing shorts, or wearing a shirt that does not cover your arms, is considered improper. Remember not to point your shoes toward someone else too. That is considered very rude.

Can you name the place I am visiting? Where in the world is this place found?
